The Argentine Republic has no foreign debt, consequently the financial barometer is waiting for a check to judge of the merits of the Government guaranteeing the undertaking.

The supposition that Mr. Robertson, however well known, powerful he may be among bondholders and "casaca," could materially damage any undertaking brought out under the auspices of such well known men as Messrs. Brassey and Wythes, is, if not ridiculous, at least not complimentary to the latter gentlemen.

The real cause of failure must be looked for elsewhere, and can be more justly attributed to the reason before given than to any other.

Meanwhile, some one must be blamed, and it is easy to find faults with and accuse an absent person, than establish the credit of a young country.

I remain, Sir,
Yours truly,

"The republic bearing the above name includes a vast area of the best portion of the South American continent, and extends over nearly a million of square miles. Its limits are defined by the Republic of Bolivia on the N. the Andes on the west, Paraguay, Brazil, and Uruguay on the east, the Atlantic on the south east, and Patagonia on the south. The country is formed almost entirely of two immense plains, covered for a portion of the year, with rich verdure. On these plains millions of oxen and sheep are supported, while other parts of the country produce excellent crops of cotton, rice, sugar cane, indigo, tobacco, maize, wheat, cochineal, madder, cinchona bark, and Paraguay tea. At present the agriculture of the country is in a very backward state; and if only a fraction of that energy and enterprise which have been so liberally applied to the North American continent were devoted to this magnificent region, the country would prove one of the richest, if not the richest, of the new world. The huge river, the Plata, flows through the country, carrying with it the vast volumes of water brought down by the Paraguay and the Paraná. The La Plata, for width and magnificence stands at the head of all the rivers of the world. It is 140 miles wide at its mouth; and even at Buenos Ayres, which is 20 miles from its mouth, the river is 30 miles broad. The country produces such, coal, alum, sulphur, and mineral pitch, and the principal articles of export are hides, horse hair, wool, horns, tallow, beef, turs, and a by no means inconsiderable supply of bullion. The Spaniards were the discoverers of the country in the sixteenth century; in 1810 this like other Spanish colonies, became independent of Spain, and in 1853 the successful soldier, Dr. Rosas, was elected Dictator of Buenos Ayres. He was subsequently defeated by Urquiza, in common with many of the newly-formed republics of South America, the Argentine Confederation has had its political troubles, and its strife and hostilities have not been lessened. The Government is now, however, settled upon a firm basis, and has for some time past been energetically devoting itself to the development of the resources of this magnificent country. Buenos Ayres is the capital, and at the same time, the principal outlet for the produce of the country, as well as for a large amount of the products of adjoining countries—among the latter the vicuña wool from Chili, copper from the rich mines of Coquimbo, gold from Chili and silver from the mines of Potosí. Between Peru and Buenos Ayres there is an extensive commerce carried on in cattle and mules. The British flag once waved over Buenos Ayres; the city was captured by the forces in 1850, but was retaken by the inhabitants in six weeks after we had possession. The attempt to recapture the city resulted in one of those very few defeats which the British troops have experienced. The city next in importance to Buenos Ayres is Córdoba, the capital of one of the provinces which make up the Confederation. It has manufactures of cotton, leather and wool; the population being about 100,000.

"It is with a view to the development of this fine territory that the Government have given valuable assistance to the project for the construction of a railway, 947 miles in length, to connect Córdoba and Rosario, the latter being situated on the Paraná, and being accessible at all states of the tide for vessels of 100 tons burden, the navigation of the Paraná northwards being uninterdicted for nearly 2000 miles. The concessions and privileges granted by the Government are most valuable, including the grant of the railway in perpetuity, freedom from taxation and all imposts for forty years, a guarantee of seven per cent on the capital required, to take effect from the opening of each section, and five years to be the limit within which the line is to be completed; and a grant of 500,000 acres. The contract for the completion of the line, at a cost of £4,000 per mile, has been entered into with Messrs. Brassey, Wythes and Wheelwright."

BEST COPY OF THE "STANDARD"
Guauguayhu, May 9, 1864.

Mr. Editor,
On last Thursday the new steamer "Ere," arrived in this port from Buenos Ayres—and as the columns of your popular press are always foremost in telling and conveying any attempt towards civilization and the commercial progress of this country, I hope to find space therein for a few lines for the well merited praise of the commercial community of Guauguayhu on having realized their brilliant object in having a steam navigation direct from Guauguayhu to Buenos Ayres. On Wednesday, 8th inst., the steamer "Ere" made a pleasure trip from Guauguayhu to Fray Bentos, taking on board about 30 persons, all of whom were delighted at the electric near the town of Fray Bentos, and on the summit of one of those beautiful and picturesque green hills enjoyed a fine champagne prepared by the "excelsior" of the company. After a useful, pleasant and mirth which is customary on such occasions, the lively sound of the steam-whistle caused us to leave the gay scene, and return on board, and again steering for Guauguayhu, to end the ceremony in a grand ball given in the Club Mercero Argentino. The steamer "Ere" is most splendidly fitted up for both cabin and storage passengers, and we wish her all success.

Yours, &c.
F. T.

THE TRANSANDINE RAILWAY

The following letter appears in the "Nation" with reference to this great undertaking:—

Santiago, 14th April, 1864.

This gigantic scheme will soon be carried to a happy finish. Mr. Megge, the contractor, will this year send in his proposals to the Chilean and Argentine Governments.

I send you, by the post, a sketch which will give you a good idea of what Mr. Megge proposes doing. I should like very much to read the articles which you have written on the subject of the future of our country. There are no longer any Andes.

Yours, &c.
JUAN LAVALLE.

Mr. Lavalle is the least bit too sanguine. It will require a good deal of what Mr. Megge proposes doing. I should like very much to read the articles which you have written on the subject of the future of our country. There are no longer any Andes.

Mr. Lavalle is the least bit too sanguine. It will require a good deal of what Mr. Megge proposes doing. I should like very much to read the articles which you have written on the subject of the future of our country. There are no longer any Andes.

The opening of Congress was almost the sole topic on "Change, and the greatest anxiety was entertained to know the President's speech. Our readers will find it in full in another column. The President adverted very severely to the scandalous opposition which had been made in London to Mr. Wheelwright, but congratulated the country that this persecuted man had at length triumphed. It appears that the National Government will subsidize for the stock 200,000 patacons. We hope Mr. Wheelwright's friends will send this good news home to that gentleman by the supplemental mail.

LOCAL EVENTS.

The President's Speech.—The native newspapers, in speaking on Wednesday night of the President's speech seemed to think that something may be learned from that source as to what people might judge of the future policy of the Government. If their expectations be realized, the President's speech must be something quite out of the run of things. It is common with many of the newly-formed republics of South America, the Argentine Confederation has had its political troubles, and its strife and hostilities have not been lessened. The Government is now, however, settled upon a firm basis, and has for some time past been energetically devoting itself to the development of the resources of this magnificent country. Buenos Ayres is the capital, and at the same time, the principal outlet for the produce of the country, as well as for a large amount of the products of adjoining countries—among the latter the vicuña wool from Chili, copper from the rich mines of Coquimbo, gold from Chili and silver from the mines of Potosí. Between Peru and Buenos Ayres there is an extensive commerce carried on in cattle and mules. The British flag once waved over Buenos Ayres; the city was captured by the forces in 1850, but was retaken by the inhabitants in six weeks after we had possession. The attempt to recapture the city resulted in one of those very few defeats which the British troops have experienced. The city next in importance to Buenos Ayres is Córdoba, the capital of one of the provinces which make up the Confederation. It has manufactures of cotton, leather and wool; the population being about 100,000.

"It is with a view to the development of this fine territory that the Government have given valuable assistance to the project for the construction of a railway, 947 miles in length, to connect Córdoba and Rosario, the latter being situated on the Paraná, and being accessible at all states of the tide for vessels of 100 tons burden, the navigation of the Paraná northwards being uninterdicted for nearly 2000 miles. The concessions and privileges granted by the Government are most valuable, including the grant of the railway in perpetuity, freedom from taxation and all imposts for forty years, a guarantee of seven per cent on the capital required, to take effect from the opening of each section, and five years to be the limit within which the line is to be completed; and a grant of 500,000 acres. The contract for the completion of the line, at a cost of £4,000 per mile, has been entered into with Messrs. Brassey, Wythes and Wheelwright."

SAVINGS BANK

BANK MAHA & CO.

No. 103 calle de Cangallo.

BUENOS-AIRES.

The immense advantages of Accounts

current are now so generally felt, and appreciated in the two great emporia of the River Plate—Montevideo &

Buenos Ayres—that there are very few Merchants who fail to keep one at the Bank in which they place the most confidence.

The Bank of Maha & Co. in Montevideo has already provided for the working class in that city, a safe &

profitable depository for their savings.

The sums deposited in that most important institution are daily increasing and already reach a very large amount.

These advantages have not hitherto been enjoyed in this city by an immense number of Clerks, artisans,

working-men & servants of all classes

and conditions, who are equally interested in putting their savings out at interest, thus providing themselves with a reserve fund in case of need, instead of old age, instead of spending time in the immoral gambling, in lotteries and other frivolities.

The Bank of Maha & Co. of this city following the example of their

Buenos Ayres September 10th 1893.

p. p. Maha & Co.

WILLIAM FERGUSON.

CONDITIONS.

1st. The Bank receives at interest any sum from Twenty five dollars currency or one silver dollar upwards.

2nd. The interest allowed is six per cent (6%) per annum which is liquidated every six months.

3rd. The depositor can at any time retire the whole or part of the money deposited.

4th. Once the amount deposited exceeds Twenty five thousand dollars currency or one thousand dollars silver the depositor if he wishes can open an account current according to the rates established by the Bank.

5th. In case the depositor loans his Bank Book it can be replaced by another on paying twelve dollars currency, and advertising the loss in the public newspapers.

The PREVISORA ARGENTINA will receive subscriptions as follows:

1st. On one's own life, in shares of $5 silver and upwards. These subscriptions liquidate at any time, at the subscriber's time and option.

2nd. Without loss of capital by death of the insurer. Subscribers will be entitled to compound interest on their subscriptions and the proportional interest forfeited by the death of other shareholders in their Class, whose capital, however, is reinstated.

3rd. With loss of capital, by death of the insurer. All shareholders of this class shall gain compound interest on their subscriptions, besides a proportional part of the capital and interest of all who die in their Class.

All these subscriptions may be paid weekly, monthly, quarterly, half yearly, or yearly.

The capital of the Company shall be invested only in landed property (finca),

and the greatest security.

The Board of Inspection, composed of subscribers, shall have charge of all the operations of the Company.

Subscriptions in Paper Money.

The Directors, wishing to enlarge the operations of the Society, have acceded to the request of many people in this city, and determined to issue shares payable in Paper Money of Buenos Ayres, under the following conditions:

Article 1st.—From the 1st of April, 1893, shares shall be issued to such persons as may wish to pay in Paper Money of Buenos Ayres, and in accordance with Article 17 clause 2nd of the Statutes of the Society, the lowest sum receivable being $200 annually, payable in one sum, or in instalments, subject to the following rule:

1st. For Paper Money Subscribers sections will be approved and kept separate from Silver Money Subscribers.

2nd. The addition of the sums belonging to the sections of Paper Money Subscribers will be administered according to Article 31 of the Statutes, and for account of these particular sections.

By these means the Directors hope to gain its object which is to enable the poorer classes to enjoy all the advantages of the Society.
