THE WEEKLY STANDARD

The sons of foreigners.

If civil war be the greatest affliction If civil war be the greatest affliction that can befal any country, we must sincerely pity all who are involved in such calamity. If the dictates of reason and policy forbid our intermeddling in local disputes, it is our imperative duty to forewarn our friends likewise. If we inherit any national spirit for the homes of our forefathers, we should involve the fact our children a reminist inculcate into our children a reminiscence of our Fatherland. These are sacred principles that force themselves upon the mind, and can neither be cortroverted by specious, sophistry nor armed legislation. How then can we excuse the present coercive enrolment of youths who have had the misfortune of youtness and make the to be born in this country, so prover-bial for intestine quarrels? It will be answered they are Argentine clitzens enjoying the privileges and liable to the obligations of this Republic. It will be urged that it is the natural duty of a man to take arms in defence of ty of a man to take arms in december this native country. It will be asserted that the place of our adoption has some claim upon our affection. To the first we object that citizenship is a boon, and should never be degraded into a penalty. The franchise of any state can neither be forced upon us a a bayonet's point, nor administered as an unpalatable dose; and if an inborn sentiment of sympathy animate the sons of foreigners to claim the country of their fathers, it is the spontaneous expression of an impulse that the that they and nurtured in their heart's blood. Therefore they are only in name Argentines, but in spirit Europeans, who gentines, but in spirit Europeans, who neither aspire to the rights nor duties of South American Republicans, and if they freely resign the one, it is not fair to burden them with the other. As to the second plea, we frankly admit, that every man is bound to honor and defend his birth-place; nor do we doubt that if a foreign enemy landed on this shore, the foremost of its defenders would be the sons of foreigners: but this is far from taking up arms in a ci-vil contest, in which one or both of the factions must be culpable, and which from its local character arrays father against son and sees brother opposed to brother. The same arm that is raised to protect, cannot be induced to slay his to protect, cannot be induced to slay his, country in the paroxysms of a suicidal strife, but rather inclines to her best interests, those of peace. Therefore he is a true lover of his country who is ever ready, to oppose an invading foe from without, and to hold aloof from netty rivalre within. petty rivalry within.

Finally we owe something to our place of residence, tis true; and do we not, each and all of us, strive to benefit the common wealth in advancing our own prospects? We, too, are not unwilling even to defend that indepennder whose constitution we live: but if the turmoil of party warfare de mand a sacrifice, at least take not from us our children, the dearest objects of us our children, the dearest objects of our care, the prop of our declining ago. The very neutrality that is required of us prevents all idea of a predilection in political color, and we who are debarred from state ambition and the honors of public greatness should be exempted from the penalties incident to native Creoles. It is preposterous that our sons should be torn from us to abot a party which we are not remitted to party which we are not permitted to recognise, and that our blood should flow to uphold a combination whose offices are closed against us.

If this State would increase the num ber of its citizens, let it give to the sons of foreigners option not compulsion in its franchise and secure domestic peace instead of never-ending quar-rels; thus will the law of citizenship lose its hateful aspect, and many will aspire to the fellowship of a pacific community, who fly in horror from being the tools of noisy ambition, or the victims of a bloody hecatomb.

Peace or War.

While everything around us betokens sanguinary struggle, the general con-iction is, that neither of the opponents s inclined to fight, and that a peace is is inclined to light, and that a peace is certain; although the preliminaries have not been adjusted. The wish is often father to the thought, and we must interpret the pacific presentiments of our friends to their dread of war and its consequences. But we con-fess ourselves rather incredulous about fess ourselves rather incredulous about this cntente cordiale, which strangely enough is accompanied with all the circumstances of a rupture, and little can be expected from the charitable interference of fore gu ministers when both parties are marshalling their le-gions to the fight. Derqui has declared that he does not refuse an accom modation, but the terms on which he insists are such as might be dictated after a signal defeat of his opponents. In a word he requires Buenos Aires to abandon the vantage ground that she has taken up arms to defend, and moreover indemnify the National Exchequer for the outlay incidental to the equipment of her enemies. Urquiza gives no greater hopes of peace, for he is resolved to make his last visit to this province, and boasts that he possesses a larger army than sufficed to conquer at Cepeda. Pride, with him, overcomes interest, and he will risk all, in order to complete the subjection of the re-bellious city that turns to ridicule his former campaigns, and defies alike his vengeance and authority. Delenda est Carthago. The twin rulers of the Re-public deem it necessary to inflict a public deem it necessary to inflict a terrible lesson on their wayward pupil, and no doubt if they have the chance, they will not spare the rod in this ex-emplary castigation. Mitre is generally credited for friendly intent but the other two profess no faith in his promises, and as Porteños know what they may expect in the event of sub-mission, there are many blustering patriots around him to prevent our ex-Governor from shewing a disposition to knuckle down, or abandon an iota of their pretensions.

Certain y if the war-preparations were intended as a joke, it would have been more advisable for both of the so closely approached the reality, and although "it is better late than never," it were desirable our fears had been sooner undeceived, by a happy denouc-ment. Yet this is a speculation in which we have no confidence: the sequel wili prove that it was not in play Urquiza crossed the Paraná, and the trenches of Buenos Ayres shall have to oppose the friendly visits of Saa and his lancers, before the idea of peace has been fully exploded.

The Argentine War.

The past week offers a blank to any future Thucydides who may undertake the history of the present campaign. Nothing has been done on either side, and the combatants so far from believ-ing that "the first blow is half the batseem like two pugnacious urchin who dare each other to fight, yet keep There are for both parties animated backers, who bid them 'go in and win", but as it is certain one must ceme off second-best, there is a display of prudence in looking at each other. Some moreover compare the rejection of mediators, almost before such were thought of, to the device of the timorous duellist who begged his friends by no means to send for the police and stop the combat. It was reported that Mitre intended to surprise Concepcion, and Urquiza was stated to be master of San Nicolas, but these daring projects had existence only in the heated brain of some enthusiaste dramer or emoryo Field Marshal. Our squadron has moved from Martin Garcia to San Nicolas; and Urquiza is waiting for Derqui at Rosa-rio. This is the summary of active This is the summary of active operations, but, as usual, red-tope has entered largely into the quarrel. First, we have a circular from this government explaining to such foreign consuls as did not understand it, the cause and circumstances of the present war. Of course it is as clear as mud that one party is all in the right, the other all in the wrong. If this document is intended to justify the attitude of Bue-nos Ayres, it is an implicit confession of previous condemnation: if it has for object to throw light on the subject, the philosophic diplomatists of our consular body cannot fail to detect a vicious circle (circulus ritiosus) in the logical deductions drawn from a disputed point which is taken for granted, amely, that our Deputies were elected in proper form.

2ndly. We hear of the conference of foreign ministers with the high con-tracting parties of the late family compact, which, by the way left as large a pact, which, by the way ren as ange a loop-hole for special-pleaders, as those gaps of English legislation through which O'Connell was accustomed to drive his ceach and four. Nature, no doubt, abliors a yacuum and if the treaty of the 11th of November was hollow, they should have crammed more stuff into it; for it is known even hay will resist a fire of muskerry. But we have no confidence in parchment rolls or big scals, and fancy there are many who talk of international rights, because they understand Hoyle's Games, and who can scarce distinguish between Story and a treatise on Theodolytes.

3rdly. We have the rumor of a mis-sion to Paraguay, Montevideo and Brasion to Paraguny, Montevideo and Bra-zil, which, supposing its truth, can have as much effect as the friendly offices of His Majesty the King of the Cannibal Islands. If the fighters are inclined to shake bands, they can do so without the permission of Don Pe-dro II. or President Lopez; and if disposed to enter the ring we imagine some ugly bruises shall have been exchanged before the peace-makers have returned from their visit to the tropics. General Mitre left town on Wednesday by special train and slept same night in Villa Lujan, so that he will probably be now in his encampment near Rojas. A decree of Sunday de-spatched four battalions of National Guards to the same destination. Other forces are said to be concentrated at Moron, Moreno and the Villa Merce-des, probably of the reserve army. Our local press computes the Argentine forces at 11 or 12,000 men.

Derqui's letter to Vice-president
Pedernera, dated Cordova, June 27th enumerates the only possible condition

1st. The National Government must have absolute control of all customs even to the imposition of differential duties, if such be pleasing.

2ndly. Buenos Ayres must yield all oreign relations, to Paraná.

3rdly. Martin Garcia must no longer remain an armed possession of that province and the navy of Buenos Ay-res must disappear, as also her standing army except such as is requisite to dearmy except such fen I the frontier.

4thly. All expenses incident to this campaign must be indemnified by Buenos Ayres.

P. S. If these terms be not accepted, I will at once march into that province and establish free quarters to make amends for my trouble.

Buropean Wews.

By the English mail we have dates from Europe up to June 15th. The most important event in England was the illness of Her Majesty which is rumored to approach the mental aberration of her Royal grand-father George III. Intelligence had been received of a scribus ou break in Newfoundlands and troops were desnatelized to approach the second and troops were desnatelized to approach the second troops are second troops and troops were desnatelized to approach the second troops are second to the second troops and troops are second troops. a scrious on break in Newformanian and troops were despatched to suppress the malcontents. Lord Palmerston had withdrawn the subsidy granted to the Galway Line of Allantic steamers, and the Irish members had therefore and the Irish members had therefore united with the Derby party, but the government, on the question of Paper Duty defeated both by a majority of fifteen. The king of Belgiunwas in London, and the Princess Frederick William was expected soon to yish her parents. The Prince of Wales is going to visit Inches of which country moved. to visit Ireland of which country report says he will become perpetual viceroy The petition for Repeal of the Union bearing 600,000 signatures is to be presented by the O'Donoghue, not to Parliament, but to her Majesty. The working of the Irish Poor-laws is undergoing investigation before a select committee of the Commons, and among other witnesses examined Doctor Cullen, Archislor of Dublin, gave at most lucid and eloquent description of the abuses that prevail in this depart-ment. Respecting foreign relations the Premier had declared that six dif-ferent causes of war existed in Europe, but Lord J. Russell aunounced notwithstanding, tat England maintained friendly terms with all the Continental powers, her peace being therefore so cure.

In France the press was promised more liberty, the right of suppression by the Emperor being restricted. The commercial treaty, and compacts of copyright and navigation were ratifled by both France and Belgium. Mr. Fould had gone to Turin on special embassy at the news of Cavour's death, which incident as many angur will throw Italy at the mercy of Napoleon.
The war-vessels sent to transport the French troops from Syrfa had arrived at Beyroit in Palestine. Prince Na-poleon having regigned his rank of Grand Master of the Masonic body, embarked with his consort, at Mar-seilles, intending to visit the South and Semina, internant to visit the South and East in, his travels. The forts of Myr-tho hall been taken by the French ar-my in Cochin-china, where the Napo-leon policy is erecting a formidable barrier to Anglo-Indian annexations. The Entperor is evidently alarmed at the opposition of the clergy, and wishes, it is said, to conciliate the Holy Faher. Five bishopries are vacant in France, yet the Pope will not receive the government nominees, and Napothe government nominees, and Napoleon will admit no others. He has even offered to withdraw his soldiers from Rome if the actual territory of the Church be guaranteed, and this will, probably be the upshot of the teclious question Italian Unity and the Pope. The death of Cavour has been a little gain to Pius IX,, but an immegas, loss to the popular cause. It is unnowed that he died like Henry 1st of Vagland from eating too much, a singlaravice in a man of such supervisor talant. Although excommunicated, he beceived though excommunicated, he received the sacraments of the Church wich the sacraments of the Church which goes to prove that the hierarchy of Piedmont pays more fealty to the king than to the Pope. Protestantism is making some advances in Italy, and this cannot be wondered at when Gari-baldi the popular idel has long since thrown aside even the name of Catho-lic. Naples is still egitated and in Sicily murders are rife. It is said that the hero of Calatafina is going to the United States: he is a stormy petrel who cannot enjoy peace even in the scene of his exploits.

Austria still menaces Sardinia, the Austria still menaces Sardinia, the concentration of utilitary stores in Venetia continues, and Padua will shortly be rendered impregnable. The taxes in Hungary have been levied by armed force, and strong sympathics are entertained by that confirty to ards Poland. In Warsaw fresh victims have fallen beneath the Kossack cavalry, and as the Czar will grant no concessions the people has grown desperate. Meantime the Victory Prince-Gordenkoff had diet amid the executions of Poland and of hemantity; and the Emperor Alexander It set out to quell the Polish revolution in juston. This is a dangerous expedient; "perchance some arm, more lucky than the rest, shall reach his heart, and free the land from bondage."
