THE NORTHERN R ILWAY INAUGURATION

Owing to the want of space in yesterday's paper we were obliged to hold over the important speeches made on the occasion by some of the most distinguished men in this country."

Mr. H. Zimmermann, the agent and representative of the Company rose and said-Mr. President, Governor, and Gentlemen, we have assembled here to-day to solemnly inaugurate the last to-day to solemuly inaugurate the last section of the Buenos Ayres Northern Railway Company. In bringing this work to a happy completion, the Company had much to contend with—many difficulties to overcome, but I fiel it my pleasing duty on this occasion to publicly thank the authorities, both Antional and Provincial, for the conjectation and assistance which at all times they have afforded us. I propose, gentlemen, as the toast, "Pro-pority to the Argentine Republic, and with it couple the names of General Mirre its President, who six on my right, and couple the names of General and the President, who site on my right, and Governor Sawedra, who is on my left."

Mr Zimmermann resumed his seat having of appliance, and the toast amidst shouts of applause, and the toast was drank with all the honors.

President tire rose and said—
Gentlemen, I feel some hesitation in being the first to recorded to the toat. Gentlemen, I feel seane hesitation in being the first to respond to the toast which you have just drank, because I think I should make way for my friend the Governor, being as it were in his house, but as he very truly remarks, wherever we be, so long as we are on the smallest spot of Argentine territory, Argentines and foreigners should con-Argentines and foreigners should conrider themselves at home. I rise to thank you all for the kind manner in which you drank the toust. I can fully, comi reheal the difficulties with which this Company has had to contend, in order to arrive at the transparation which we are this day all assembled. order to arrive at the way nation when we are this day all assembled, to confimenorate, but it is my ardent wish that the road will not stop in San Fernando, but will be continued on through our the road with not step in San Fernando, but will be continued on through our rich and fertile plains along the Parana I hope yet to see the locomotive of the Northern Railway leaping over our streams and creeks, climbing up our hills, and sweeping through our valleys. Would to theaven that our country gentlemen was divided only by railways, but unhappily we are torn by political intrigues—about what, gentlemen?—shout miserable insignificant details. Notwithstanding, however, alt the noise which is made by a band of restless politicisms, who protend; to have the sanction of the Covernor of they provines. I here most solemnly declare, as President of the Argentime Republic, that I have always over with the great est support from my friend Gavornor Saxedla, who has laboured unceasingly to help me in the national organization. Deeply do I regret that those who have always belonged to the same party as myself should now differ about traffer Deeply do I regret that those who have always belonged to the same party as myself chould now differ about triffes, but proud an I to say that I count upon no steadite friend, no warmer ally than ariano Saavedra, to extend of the Province of Buenos Ayres—Built up with foreign capital, I am pledged as the President of this maion to the stockholders of the Narthern Relives. as the President of this maion to the stockholders of the Northern Railway, for the maintenance of peace in the country, and with the help of God, come what will, k shall perpense it (nomentong cheeging). It is not with the cup in hand that we car, treat best on such subjects as points s, as it is easy to get off the roil, but, I avail physical of the presence of the leading foreigners in the presence of the leading foreigners in the presence of the leading foreigners. In one of Argentine nationality, Nay more, I hope to see this messenger.

Nay we have always provents and binding them into a compact form of Argentine nationality.

Nay more, I hope to see this messenger.

Dr. Rawson (Prime Minister) then rose to propose health and prosperity rose. — Gentlemen, the inauguration which we come here to-day to commenorate is, I hope, an onen of a bright future for this nation; shaken almost I future for this nation; shaken almost I may say to pieces by civil wars and anarchy, the Argentine Repullie is just emerging from that long dark period of bloodhed and ruin. Oh! my friends, could we but only spend the public money in railways and such like, instead of wasting it in swords and gunpowder, how happy would we not be? Thode funct caudillo Penaloza, has cost the mation over two millions of dollars; what a shane, what a disgrace; what a what a strain, what a disgrace, what a los, that such a sum of money should have blen spent in the desert lands of Ripa when we want all the money, we can get to make railways and if we take into account the enormous suga-of private property, what will it not amount to? My friends, it behoves us amount to? My friends it behaves us all, after so said an experience; to preserve in this country peace at any cost Unhappily there is at present much political strife, but it is not too much for me to say that I trust to the good sense of the people themselver; let us occupy our minds and our fortunes with railways and not base political intrigues, and the day, my friends, is not far distant when the Argentine Repub far distant when the Argentine Repub tie will ascend to the dignified and exlie will ascend to the dignition and ex-alted position of a strong, happy, and prosperous nation, occupied with every thing save revolutions and politics. I toast, my friends, for the prolongation of this railway, and trust that the iron rails will bind together in peace and harmony the Aventine provinces.—

(Crempud...) the Provincial Finance Minister—That he proposed as toast the continuation of the Ruilway to the Palmas, and in a few discreet sentences stated the approval of the Gorganization to the Manual table his vernment to the plan.

Mr. Parish (English Consul) rose to thank the Governor for his kind ex pressions towards the country which he represented; he hoped that the Argentine nation would always be united in the bords of peace and harmony; that the different railways be united, and thus be as symbols of the secal union which should be always be the secal union which should be as symbols of thus be as symbols of the secul union which should exist in this country (cheers). He was happy to see the friendly relations which existed between fingland sind-this country daily growing stragger, and as he looked down the leating-board and heheld so many of his follow country were hide by side with in fellow countymen side by side with illy their Argentine brethern, he felt a nich satisfaction which it was impossible to express (terrine applause),

Hon Mr. Kirk addressed the company in English—Gentlemen, It is my misfortune not to understand Span'sh, and as I have been requested to make come observations I will do so briefly, for I did not come here with the interior of delivering, a decourse. for I did not come here with the intention of delivering a discourse. I am indeed most happy to meet you all to day on this joyful occasion, the celebration of a new triumph of industry in these countries. It is by the arts of prace alone that a state can progres a had if we look to the giant strides me due in late years by my country, we shall find they went land in hand with an unparallelled railway development. Have we not, in daily tradic, over 0,0 0 miles of railways forming a complete net work throughout the Union? And now, ever, and the fury of civil war and bustle of hostile armaments, we are workers, hard and fast at the Grand Western line to the Pacific, which will unite California with the at the Grand Weste en liss to the Pacific, which will unit e California with the tlautic seabord in a continuous iran road 350 infles long. EDITOR'S TABLE.

Perhaps the ablest and most important article ever published in our coumus is Dr. Fitzsimons answer, to-day to Mr. Murray's sceptical essay on Geology. GREAT FIRE IN DUBLIN.

Dec. 11, 1863.

The most threatening fire which appeared in Dublin for a long series of years was that which broke out last night at the extensive timber stores of Mr. Kelly, Thoma-street. Those only who know the premises can appreciate the danger from which we have escaped. Acres of space, covered with laths and sawn timbers of every scantling, pre-sented food for the devouring element, such as it rarely has an opportunity to revel in; and when we remember that these extensive premises, so laden with combustibles, were surrounded by old and densely crowded dwellings, and that the timbers which they contained were piled in order to their being duly scasoned, just as a canny housemaid piles her taggets when she desires to light her morning five rapidly, and nght her morning me raphus, and would have given as free a passage to the oxygen and the flame as they did to the drying wind, we can form some estimation of the providential escape the city has had from one of the greatest conflagrations of our day. Fortunately, however, the Dublin Corporation, anxious to render the improved water sup-ply as effective as possible, resolved to superadd a Fire Brigade organization, and that Brigade, for which some of the Corporation had to struggle against calumny and a fierce opposition stained calumny and a heree opposition stained with unworthy shanders, so battled with the fire last night, that, after a strife of nearly two hoars, it was completely subdued, and a populous district of the risy was saved from a r in that at one time seemed inevitable. The flames borst forth in the engine-room of the saw units about half-past eight o'clock, are savedily enveloped the engine house in its devouring embrace. The butters charged with steam sat in the "Yesterthy afternoon, at half-past four, a great 'tormenta' overwhelmed this town. On a sudden, all became dark as midnight: nothing could be seen distinctly, and joined to the howling wind and suffocating dust, the crice and hancintations on all sides, people praying aboud, dogs barking lowls shricking, and roofs being blown off, gave one a perfect idea of Pandemonium, or what may be expected to be like a hubbib, on the day of judgment. This awful state of chaoscomitimed for about an hour, when fortunately rain began to fall and the light to return. It is expected that bad news will shortly arrive of the rayages of this storm in the interior, as it is more than likely that the loss both of human line and of sheep must be someshing considerable."

We have since heard from Areco that the storm was so awful the people thought it the end of the world. All boders charged with steam sat in the midst hellame, and though to the uninctual a they seemed like so much harmless metal, those who knew the the decision, and the well-directed skill of the brigade, the safety of this large district is due. After two hours' incessant toil, the fire was completely

NOTICE OF MIT CHARLES MURRAY'S ARTICLE ON GEOLOGY, "HOW OLD ARE WE?"

St. Patrick's College: San Jose de Flores, January '0, 1864. To the Editors of the 'Standard.' Gentlemen.

I have just looked over the first number of the ' River Plate Magazine, number of the 'River Plate Magazine,' and whilst I express my satisfacion on reading many of the articles. I cannot refrain from saving, that it would be well if the editor exercised a little more discrimination in the insertion of papers from the pens of contributors. It is to be presumed, that all the readers of the magazine are Christians, and, such being the case, articles calculated to meetile men's belief in the authenticity, veracity, or inspiracalculated to insection measurements the authenticity; veracity, or inspira-tion of the Scriptures, might, without inflicting an injury on his readers, be left out; or if dispreed to give full record to freedom of opinion and freedom record to freedom of opinion and freedom of discussion, it may be advisable that contributions having eyen indirectly such a tendency, should not pass unnoticed. I allude, in particular, to a paper which appears in the magazine, from Mr. Charles Murray, and read in September last, before the Argentine Pharmaceutical Society, and which was received apparently with much favour by that learned and enhyltened body, as it was published in their review of October 1st, 1863; at least so the author tells us. author tells us.

I am disposed to think that the act of the Pharmaceutical Society, sanctioning and approving Mr. Murray's theory, based, as it is, on a fulse assumption, and sustained by illogical reasoning, is not calculated to exalt them in the mind of the thinking and educated portion of society.

Mr. Marray seems to think that there Mr. Marray seems to think that there is a contradiction between the Bible and Geology; that up to a very recent period we were in a state of profound ignorance as to the age of the world and the age of man, and that we were led into this error by believing the teaching of a certain book called the Bible, and that those learned men, such as Tirin, Salim, Tournemine, Perron, as Tirin, Salim, Tournemine, Perron, Ussher, and Linglet, our best and most learned writers on Biblical chronology, were only a set of fools, unworthy of any credit. Now, I mean to show that Mr. Murray is wrong in asserting that there is a contradiction between the Bible and Geology, and that he has not proved his case.

Had Mr. Murray paid but half as much attention to the traching of the Bible, as he seems to have done to that of his geological friends, he would not have fallen into such gross errors, for fact, he appears as charmed with not have fallen into such gross errors. In fact, he appears so charmed with their geological discoveries, and regarding them as proofs irrefragable against the Bible, that he scens mot to have opened the Sacred Volume at all. Had he read the first chapter of Genesic, it could not have escaped a man of his sense and discernment, that the creation of the earth and the creation of man a c two distinct facts, which are not stated to have happened at the same time; he would not have fallen into the mistake, that in creation of the earth was included by the work of the six days, and would have work of the six days, and would have been spared the trouble of supposing that the days mentioned in Genesis were periods of almost unlimited duration, which he has done, no doubt, with the charitable intention of pre-serving the Bible from being regarded as an antiquated fable, fit only for the dust basket or charitable intention. Mr. dust basket or chandler's shop. Mr. Murray asserts that geology says one thing, and that the Bible says another. and assumes that goology is right, and that the libbe is wrong; but when he examines the subject a little better, he will change his opinion, and admit, with me, that there is, in reality, no contradiction between them. Now, what can we collect from the Scripture ? What can we contect from the Scripture 4 Simply this, that in the beginning God created the Heavens and the Earth, and afterwards, but how long afterwards we know not, when the earth was shapeless and void, and darkness was on the face of the deep, God was pleased to fashion it for the bubitation of man. The Bible does not any what time claused let were the appears, on one occasion, having no engagement on hand, rambled into the northern counties of England to look after his relatives, and not content with the living specimens he met with, he entered the church yard to look after the dead, and he saw, to his great astonishment, by the record on the tomb stone, that one of his family lived to the ripe old age of 845. He naturally inquired after the matter, and the following explanation was given:—After the good old man had been consigned to the dust, a stone cutter was cumloyed to place a tembstone even after his relatives, and not content with signed to the dust, a stone cutter was comployed to place a tombstone over him, and on which were inserted all his virtues, and aged 84 years. An old kinsman, coming to see if full justice had been done to his departed friend, found fault with the age, said he was five years older, and insisted that the stone-cutter should add that number to his work. The simple tradesman took him at his word, and added fice to eighty-four. Thus, by one figure, he made the good old lenglish yeoman a patianch, who died at the age of 845 years, and so it stands to this day. Let us see how Mr. Murray proceeds to enlarge our longevity. He brings forward a few bricks found in the bed of the Nile, and a jaw-bone found in

to charge our longevity. It's brings forward a few bricks found in the bed of the Nile, and a jaw-bone found in France; and on these two facts he builds up a theory to show that man, instead of being about six thousand years old, must at least be twelve thousand. Bricks are very useful in ordinary purposes, but for such a structure as 1. Murray designed, he will find them very useful or fact, in the grainest of the Nile, and thus reasons Mr Murray on this geological fact:—"If the Nile deposited in ancient times, at the same rate as at present, that is, five inches in every hundred years, the man who made those bricks must have lived twelve thousand years ago." Now, if Mr. Murray imposed on himself by such a system of ratiocination, he should not wish to impose on others. To establish his conclusion, he should first prove, beyond a question of doubt, that the Nile in ancient times did depasat only five inchesteery hundred years. But this he has not done, or even attempted. His theory, then, must fall to the ground. All calculations, made on the overflowing of the Nile, must partake of the uncertainty of the intended that the river. I would must partake of the uncertainty of the inundations of that river. I would have expected, from a man of Mr. Murray's research and taste for antiquarian lore, that he would have quoted some authority on the subject; nor would I have been astonished, if he had favoured us on this subject with the opinion of the representative of Egyptan science, viz., Trismegistus. must partake of the uncertainty of the in Genesis that it was formed in six days, as Mr. Murray fabely assumes, and on which faire assumption founds an argument arainst the veracity of the Secret Volume itserf. They would also tell him, that six thousand years have not yet elapsed since the creation of man, and that neither he nor any other? has an yet made a discovery te prove, that the human race; is of bight, antiquity.

Mr. Murray says that "geologists to require a greater space of time than six thousand years, in order to account of the shell of our globe, and that the earth munt have existed for millions of years." Now, the Script tare does not, in any place, assert the contrary. All this required time many for such as possible to the contrary. All this required time many for the contrary. All this required time many for the shell, as in a supposed, by Marta the carth munt have existed for millions of years." Now, the Script tare does not, in any place, assert the contrary. All this required time many for the shell, as in a supposed, by Marta the carth munt have existed for millions of years. "Now, the Script tare does not, in any place, assert the contrary." All this required time many for the shell of our globe and that the carth munt have existed for millions of years. "Now, the Script tare does not, in any place, assert the contrary." All this required time many for the shell of our globe and that the carth munt have existed for millions of years. "Now, the Script tare does not, in any place, assert the contrary." All this required time many for the shell, as in a supposed, by Marta tare does not, in any place, assert the contrary. All this required time many for the shell, as in a supposed, by Marta tare there is a contrary. All this required time many for the shell of our globe that the carth munt have existed for millions of years." Now, the script the contrary is the shell of our globe that contrary. All this required time many for the shell of our globe that the carth munt have existed for millions of years." Now, the script and the c deposits of considerable depth, demonstrates that man existed when that part of the country was covered with water a hundred feet deep, and hence he leaps at the conclusion that man is much older than Biblical chronology has led us to believe. Here Mr. Murray reasons much the same as those who wanted to prove that the Tenterdon steeple caused the Goodwin sands. I can see no connection whatever between steepic caused the Goodwin sands. I can see no connection whatever between the conclusion at which he arrives and the fact from which he deduces it. He does not say, nor is it stated, how deep the sediment was in which was found this bone, but merely it was 'considerably deep.' We know how soon valleys are filled to a considerable depth with sediment washed down by heavy rains from the surrounding while and correct to the 'interrogation' and 'interpretation' of Nature in collecting and arranging well-ascertained facts.

Mr. Murray, like all good writers, core each while and considerable depth with sediment washed down by heavy rains from the surrounding hille, and how easily bones and flints might be covered in a short time. But Mr. Murray asserts, without giving us any reason, that man existed when this part speak envelope their own intellects ra-ther than the subject of investigation. Many of them helong to that class of writers designated by Archibishop Whately, "the children of the mist," who bring forward their speculations— often very silly and not selden very often very silly, and not seldom very mischiovous—under cover of twilight. Bishop Copelston styles them "the magic-lamborn school." At the same time it must be admitted that many who have devoted themselves to the study of geology command our respect, and have deserved well of society; but they are man who follow, the teaching terpretation" of Nature in collecting and arranging well-ascertained facts.

Mr. Murray, like all good writers, sets out by giving a definition of his subject. He tells us that geology is the science which treats of "mineralogical and poleantological structure of the globe." Now, this sounds well, but unfortunately there is not an atom of truth or meaning in it. Geology, in the strict sense of the word, is not a science at all. It is merely a concovered in a short time. But Mr. Murry son, that 'man existed when this part one hundred feet.' Nothing but one hundred feet of water will suit his purpose. Well, be it so. Mr. M. should not forget the deluge, for I am sure he has read the account of it as given in the Bible. He is there, told, that all the mountains under the heavise were covered with water, and that the water was fifteen cubits over the highest mountains in the world. Would not this give Mr. Murray the hundred feet of water required, and save himself a world of conjecture? Now, in struth, Mr. Murray is quite right in supposing that man existed when this gravel pit at Abbeville was covered with water one hundred feet, and in this he is sustained by Scripture, which tells us that man was created before the deduge; but he is not justified in saying that therefore the human race is older than we are told it is by Biblica enronology.

Now, I would ask Mr. M., how does the discovery of the bone 'prove the existence of man prior to the time that common theory gives it?' To account for it he requires one hundred feet of water; and here he finds, according to fine common theory gives it?' To account for it he requires one hundred feet of water; and here he finds, according to five country was actually covered with more than one hundred feet of water; and here he finds, according to five country was actually covered with more than one hundred feet of water in the secondary truths may be deviated by the secondary truths was primered, and another thing to read it. The Postmaster—The 'Progres,' of Friday has a short paragraph on the inconvenience caused by the delaying of the French mail bags at the Resguardo. It asks, whether it is to oblige the employees of that office, by a first view of the letter-ary contents, or to prevent any smuggling? The latter is scarcely probable, as the despatchers of mail-bags are not noted for trying to evade the laws. It is not many years ago since 'Punch' was prohibited from entering France, and now Sr. Cazon may have the same ideas about the Paris 'Charivari,' as the 'Elected of the People,' then entertained with regard to the London publication.

Housebreaking—The swatchmaker's shop, Calle Holivar, No. 46, has been broken into and robbed some few days ago. 'The watchmaker, an old man, has bert it is raid $14,000. limited, and trade in general is not to say brisk.

The carge of flour per Volante has not been sold, although native flour is going up very steadily—ne hear that the price asked is 9 p.ts.

The Paven arrived vesterday, bringing 3½ oz., 610 pats 685 bol. 8 marks silver, 800 dols. mpc. The news from the interior is unimportant. Things look very quiet in the Provinces.

Money is in good demand, but not to say tight. Amongst the working classes ready money we hear is very plentiful. The Mana Savings Bank has now one hundred and it ty thousand silver dollars in small deposits. This is the most decided proof of the great utility of the institution. It is now only open four months, and yet the deposits almost amount to ten thousand ounces.
