The 'Nacion Argentina' inquires, why not fetch marble from Tandil, instead of sending for this commodity 2500 leagues across the Atlantic? We are glad to see Argentine editors covering their wife, after the delirium of miniature politics. We would add, why not fetch marble from Patagonia instead of Chali? and coal from the Pampa of Patagonia instead of Cardiff?

The Great Southern Railway Company must regard this discovery in the far south as a most favourable omen, and intoring the prolongation of the line to Dr. Sarisfield's country residence (Cabo de Los Virreyes): it is most likely Sr. Borges will be the means of providing a contingent of goods traffic for the Great Southern. Any parties desiring further particulars, may apply at this office, or at Sr. Borges' house, 313, Calle Comercio.

MR. RIESTRA'S MONETARY SCHEME.

Our noted financier, M. Riestra, has at last brought forth a project for the redemption of the paper money, at the rate of 100 dol. per ounce, or 25 dol. per patacon.

On a careful perusal of M. Riestra's letter to the Legislature, explaining the working of the proposed law, we feel satisfied that it is about the best scheme which has ever been introduced. We regret to remark, however, that it is very complicated, and lacks simplicity.

The following is the proposed law: Art. 1. The Bank of the Province shall cease to be a bank of emission, and shall deliver up its bank notes, plates, &c. to be publicly destroyed.

Art. 2. The paper money in circulation shall be redeemed in the following manner: 1. The total amount of paper money in circulation, and which has no special amortization fund, shall be redeemed by public bonds, the principal of which shall be expressed and payable in specie with 6 per cent interest and 1 per cent amortization.

Art. 3. The public specie bonds shall be exchanged at a discount of 25 per cent of their par value for paper money, at the rate of 25 dol. per silver dollar of 16 to the ounce.

Art. 4. The specie bonds shall be offered to the public according to the following order: 1. The amount of paper money exchanged for bonds shall be publicly destroyed. The redemption of paper money shall be purely optional with the holders of paper money.

Art. 5. For the payment of these bonds there shall be set apart especially: 1. The total amount realized from sale and renting of public lands. 2. The amortized profits of the bank.

Art. 6. The interest and amortization of the specie bonds shall be paid quarterly in paper money, at the rate of 25 per silver dollar, or in specie, at the option of Government. The amortization shall take place by public tenders, the Government reserving to itself the right of increasing the amortization fund, and also making it obligatory.

Art. 7. In order that the circulating medium shall not be diminished, all holders of the specie bonds shall and hereby are empowered to emit convertible bank notes to the extent and value of the specie bonds which they may hold, in conformity with the law for that purpose to be made and provided.

Art. 8. In case the present paper money shall at some future period be come of the value prescribed by this law, the Government is authorized to suspend the amortization, and to receive from the National Government the equivalent of what it still owes, in six per cent bonds, which shall be handed over to the Bank, and the capital or principal of said bonds shall be applied to the redemption of the paper money for which they have been received.

Art. 9. The Government is empowered to contract with any private bank for the renewing or exchanging of the paper money whilst the amortization is going on, and the renewed bills shall be entirely of different formation and color, bearing upon their face the stamp of the Government, without which such bills are null and void.

At the late horse-show in Dublin, it was found there was not a single animal in Ireland deserving the first prize, and yet we can remember the days of a Faugh-a-ballagh, when English fanciers came to Ireland for horses, the Irish breed being esteemed superior to the Arabian.

The commercial hopes of the country are blasted, by the utter failure of the Galway Atlantic Steam Co. Trade and industry are completely dead, and we have a true picture of distress in the evictions, threatening letters, and emigrations which are the order of the day.

The exodus from Cork is estimated at 1,000 per week, and Limerick is fast there is a notable diminution, and thousands of farmers, who survived the terrible famine and subsequent era of emigration, are forced in their old age to leave the country.

Secret societies, Feman associations, and revolutionary brotherhoods are on the increase, and a militia regiment has been recently tried, for unlawfully drilling in Cork. Lord Carlisle is said to intend resigning the Vice-Royalty. Sir Robert Kane has renounced the Presidency of the Queen's College, Cork.

Metropolitan railways are in construction in Dublin, and the abolition of the Irish National Museum is spoken of by the Prince and Princess of Wales as expected to pass the summer in Ireland.

ATAR-GULL.

It is the name of a tragically introduced upon the boards of the Victoria Theatre in this city, according to some, with signal success, to others, as an equally signal failure; but in neither of these criticisms can we recognize an impartial criticism, laboring as it is talented writer under the ban of political animosity, which, unfortunately, in this country blinds an adversary in his judgments upon the works of his opponent.

We have not seen it performed, and can therefore judge of its composition solely by the copy before us. The scene is laid in Pernambuco, in Brazil, towards the end of the last century.

The Dramatic Personae are two English planters, respective Thomas Wilson and Robert Wills, this latter a bachelor, the former married, his wife appearing as Anna, and having an only daughter, Sophia. Theatrical is a doctor of 28 years; Burelart, an old French Count, but at present a slave 45 years old; and Atar-Gull, the hero of the piece, is a black of 26 years—servants and blacks fill the number to ten.

The first act opens by Thomas Wilson recounting to Robert Wills the encumbered state of his affairs—bills becoming due on the morrow which will ruin him. Wills offers an expedient, as he is an interested party, Wilson owing him a considerable amount, acquainting him that by the colonial laws a black being handed over to justice for the crime of theft, the prosecutor is entitled to four hundred silver dollars, two whites being necessary for the conviction, and recommends him to act accordingly with one of his old slaves who is of no further use.

He is really concerned, but he is bound as the moral of the play. The hard-heartedness and cupidity of Wills being brought out in strong contrast with the compassionate smartings of conscience of Wilson when about to commit an act of infamy, but as 'circumstances alter cases,' so Wilson's twitches, under the powerful reasoning of Wills added to rain on the morrow, were easily overcome, and that which he had hitherto considered as virtue he now holds to be cowardice. Wills' character is the same throughout, and Wilson's nature seems ever to have been vacillating, as we deduce from the oft repeated promise to his declining wife of speedy return to Scotland.

But Wilson's safety is not to be obtained by the death of the poor negro, and at the very moment when Wills, self-interested, is hurrying on the trial of the convicted black, Burelart the slave appears, makes a profession of love for Sophia to her father and offers in exchange for her hand, a cargo of slaves, then in port, besides a dowry to herself of one hundred thousand dollars. Wilson's joy at this unexpected turn of fortune is almost immediately drowned by Wills entering and informing him that the judicial accusation only awaits his (Wilson's) and Burelart's depositions to bring the poor wretch to execution. The war of the mind is very much represented by the writer himself in the play in the role of Wilson. The fearful stop he had already taken was now, as it were, looming with distant horrors. But the black is hung, and Sophia the affianced bride of the slave.

HILLAND.

The news by last packet is but a continuation of the sad story, that, while all the rest of Europe is progressing, the country which has produced so many statesmen of transcendent talents, and tended so powerfully to push ahead the United States, Canada, and Australia, is fast progressing to destruction.

SAVINGS BANK
BANK MAUA & CO.
No. 103 calle de Cangallo.
BUENOS-AYRES.

The immense advantages of Accounts current are now so generally felt, and appreciated in the two great emporiums of the River Plate—Montevideo & Buenos Ayres—that there are very few Merchants who fail to keep one at the Bank in which they place their most confidence.
The Bank of Mauá & Co. in Montevideo has already provided for the working class in that city, a safe & profitable depository for their savings.
The sums deposited in that most important institution are daily increasing and already reach a very large amount.
These advantages have not hitherto been enjoyed in this city by an immense number of Clerks, artisans, workmen, and servants of all classes & conditions, who are equally interested in putting their savings out at interest, thus providing themselves with a reserve fund in case of need, sickness or old age, instead of spending them in the immoral gambling, in lotteries and other frivolities.
The Bank of Mauá & Co. of this city following the example of their Buenos Ayres September 19th 1863.

The Bank of Mauá & Co. is sufficiently known to the public by the benefit derived from the course of its operations which are regulated on the strictest and soundest principles and always directed to promote the general welfare.
The Bank of Mauá & Co. are also proud to add that this new branch of their business will render immense service to the working classes of Buenos Ayres and its neighbourhood.

WILLIAM LESLIE.
