Sympathy with Peru.

Great Meeting at the Retiro. The largest assemblage seen for many years in B. Ayres, except at the May festival, was that of Sunday, convened by the Club Puelo, as a manifestation in favour of Peru in the actual question with Spain. As might be expected, there was a considerable sprinkling of foreigners, animated, perhaps, mostly by curiosity, but many also by sympathy for South American independence. It is to be regretted that the intervention and even insolent tone of the speakers alienated many friends, and there was a marked absence of enthusiasm attending the allusions to the "rotten kingdoms of Europe."

The hour appointed was noon, but when we arrived there were hardly 400 persons in the Plaza Retiro, standing in knots about the statue of General San Martín. Among these we noticed the Editors of the "Tribuna" and "Pueblo," a few other literary and forensic celebrities. At half past twelve, the music being raised, two bands of military were stationed in front of the statue, and one of them played the National Hymn, while a battery of four pieces fired a salute from the hill overlooking the gas house.

At one o'clock General Yriarte and other heroes of the Independence arrived on the ground, but were not saluted with a single viva! A table was procured and, being placed against the railing of the statue, served for a platform. Don Hector Varela proposed that General Yriarte should preside, and that gentlemen mounted the table, each, being followed by several. At this time the crowd could not have been under 4,000 persons.

It seemed that the proceedings of the meeting had not been clearly arranged, only one member of the Club Puelo figuring on the platform, and the President of that body (Sr. Gutierrez) not attending. The veterans of Independence wore no uniforms, and inspired little of martial fervor in their feelings and jerry lads. Nor were the speeches other than a few pet phrases strung together on the spur of the moment, and so lacking of interest that not a single cheer was heard. Small boys were scrambling for some bread crumbs, and the crowd, to the effect that the great meeting of B. Ayres held in the Retiro, on the 5th of April, had resolved to send to Peru a public declaration of sympathy.

General Yriarte, having taken off his hat, opened the affair by saluting the statue of General San Martín, in the name of Argentina and all South American republicans. He briefly explained the object of the meeting, and uttered amidst sundry "Vivas!"

Don Alvaro Barros, an old gentleman who had held some civic post under the first Republican Government, reminded the audience of the efforts made by their forefathers for liberty, and hoped the present generation would bury the Vandals who dared to pollute the sacred soil of America. The audience, however, was not so easily won over, and the speaker's words were drowned in a fierce encounter to free ourselves from the galling yoke which Spain, the mother country, had imposed on the kingdom of the Incas. Under the leadership of the speaker, the audience, in a few moments, was pointing to the statue, this second time, and who crossed the snow-capped Andes, we carried the Argentine flag from the triumph to triumph, till San Martín, on the 5th of April, 1818, smote down the lion of Castile, on the plains of Chacabuco, and freed three Republics. From the Plata to Rio de Janeiro, from the Cordillera to the Andes, the old regime was extirpated, and our lungs breathed the vigorous and healthy air of liberty (cheers). The oppressors cherished the bitter remembrance of humiliation, and sought a pretext to assail our republican institutions; but when reason was found wanting they adopted the arms of brute force and of barbarism. We are told that the War of Independence is not over—that there has only been a cessation of hostilities. Well, then, we accept the declaration, and urge our men to the sword. The Spanish trumpet has already sounded: let the Argentine cannon-below forth a response. The historic year, 1810, will aid Peru to resist the aggression of our former tyrants; we will teach a lesson not only to the nations of S. America, but to mankind, that the fire of patriotism is unquenchable, and we will hold up to execration the Government whose adulterers are pirates and whose generals are robbers (applause).

Sr. Bilbao said: Citizens! Know that what is happily between the old system and aggression of Spain? It is not merely a city or people, but an idea—the idea of Liberty and Republicanism. Liberty is the home of every republican. The rotten thrones of Europe have not inspired against this new order of things, which is destined to elevate man to its proper rank, liberty, dignity, honor, and conditions of crowned heads, religion (ecclesiastic), and aristocracy. Mexico has already fallen and Peru is now assailed, but we must defend our honor before being reduced to European vassalage. For, what happens can remain to those subjected to the dictates of monarchy and priestcraft? Let us manfully support the struggle for liberty, the old system and the new, leading in mind that to us are entrusted those grand principles of humanity which extend freedom to all men and realize the idea of universal brotherhood. It is our duty to sympathize with those who raise against our Peruvian brethren, and be the forerunner to the glorious campaign we undertake. The speaker, on concluding, was embraced by General Yriarte.

Don Hector Varela said: The practical act of a Spanish Commander has filled us with indignation, and we are even threatened with a repetition of the struggle for liberty, dignity, honor, and freedom, which we have already won. Let us, therefore, defend our rights, and let us be the forerunner to the glorious campaign we undertake. The speaker, on concluding, was embraced by General Yriarte.

A person calling himself a Spaniard (name unknown) declared himself a Republican, and expressed his indignation at the tyrannical measures of the Madrid Cabinet, and regarded Pinzon as a pirate (cheers and hiss). A nervous looking young man named Rodriguez, from the Custom-house returned to remind the meeting that the only great man of Argentina, and the only one who had not been degraded by the yoke of Spain, was Moreno (murmurs). No one could well understand the drift of this speech, and as the orator wore a respectable, rather tiresome with dry repetition, the meeting moved off in silence to the Plaza.

When the crowd turned down Calle Florida, there were close upon 5,000 persons in the long file of the crowd. The meeting was carried off in silence to the Plaza. The speaker, on concluding, was embraced by General Yriarte.

The committee seemed anxious to break up the meeting, and the speaker, on concluding, was embraced by General Yriarte.

two, in Buenos Ayres, we have many outlets from their country who will unite their efforts to ours, to the detriment of aiding a sister republic, which has been assailed by a pirate. The hour has arrived for action. Let us not merely demonstrate sympathy to public demonstration and grand speeches. We are bound to stand by Peru, and we must urge the Government and Congress in this sense. If there be any recreant in power who dare oppose, let us drag him on, and show him the path of honor, the laurels of the sovereign people, and the duty of those who stand at the helm of state.

Capt. Manilla said: The cause of republicanism is endangered, and with it the dearest prerogatives of our human condition. Republic means perfection, for Reason has invented no form of Government so equitable, and the history records the most brilliant exploits under popular sovereignty. The philosophers of Greece first invented the republic, and under the shadow of its institutions sprung up the arts of England. The French Republic rests on an unparalleled pinnacle of greatness, for never did even the legions of the great tyrant Napoleon see such crowning glories as attend the triumph under the valiant republican general, Marceau. The system of monarchy has long been exploded by all men of generous aspirations, and the tyrants of Europe have been reduced to European vassalage. Let us, therefore, defend our rights, and let us be the forerunner to the glorious campaign we undertake. The speaker, on concluding, was embraced by General Yriarte.

away hither and thither by the zephyrs. With this sentiment is mixed an admiration for the lovely picture unfolded to us by Nature. As the horizon extends, the rivers show themselves in a hundred windings; the cities and hamlets are seen in groups, we can count the roads and highways uniting them with each other, and the whole panorama is highly interesting. The different productions of the earth are readily distinguished by their variety of hue and shade. A field of corn is easily discernible, from a grass meadow, a forest from a vineyard. Passing 500 yards, the proportions of each object diminish most sensibly: men look like insects, and have also the atmosphere becomes gradually broken, and we begin to exchange ideas conversing on the subject.

Soon the ascending force of the balloon impels us to a height of 1000 or 1200 yards; and with a more intense cold we feel a humming in the ears. At 2000 yards we can make ourselves heard only with a great effort, the medium of sound density is felt in every part of the body. The air is gradually broken, and we begin to exchange ideas conversing on the subject.

At 4,000 yards high the cold becomes excessive, the surface of the earth covered with snow, the sky is serene and generally deep blue. Reach 6,000 yards we see only large masses, and if a cannon shot is fired below, the results are very curious. The air is so rare that it is difficult to breathe, and the voice can no longer be heard, except with extreme difficulty; and small animals die at this degree of elevation. The atmosphere is so rare that it is difficult to breathe, and the voice can no longer be heard, except with extreme difficulty; and small animals die at this degree of elevation.

The loss of gas, or sometimes its condensation by cold, causes the balloon to descend very rapidly, the cold becomes less intense, and the earth, which just now seemed but a grayish mass, unfolds itself anew, with its various and beautiful features. apiracy, headed by Moreno, Augier, and Recalde, and a man named Luanda Castro, has been arrested, and is expected to be shot hourly. Commander Cordova, who is the most influential officer in the province, has had a split with the Government, and the Catamarcan believe a revolution is imminent.

It is most afflictive to learn the foregoing particulars respecting the province, which, if properly governed, would be the richest in the Republic. Catamarca cotton ranks higher than even United States Sea Island, and yet notwithstanding the enormous value of such cotton, not one pound is produced. The leading idea of the province, instead of occupying themselves with augmenting the staples, are wasting their time and the public money in hateful politics. What, may we ask our readers think of this? Provincial Government? Is it not time they should be all abolished?

Editors' Table. The departure of the three Ministers, on Sunday evening, for Montevideo, took all the town by surprise. If Sr. Lamas and Elizalde had gone down by themselves on board any of our river steamers, people would not have wondered so much, but when it was known that the Shell-drake was getting up steam, and Mr. Thornton, the British Minister, was to accompany their Excellencies, the quidnuncs were on the tip-toe of excitement. We hope this distinguished trio will succeed in arranging the Oriental Brazilian question, as things are beginning to look very cloudy on the other side.

Yesterday it rained all day long in town, and we have not heard from the camp; but from the appearance of the weather, we think it must have rained from here to the Chichas Islands. A German sheepfarmer, resident at San Borombón, has bought a splendid estancia in Santa Fe, the other side of the Caracaras, 17 leagues from Rosario, at the rate of 4000 Bolivian dollars per square league. The land has a fine monte on it, and is inclosed and bounded. He says that people who go down to Tandil, and pay 200,000 dollars, there are they are constantly in danger of the Indians, instead of buying land in Santa Fe at 60,000 dollars, they will find out their mistake. Three leagues further out, two Englishmen have also recently bought an estancia, and driven their sheep from Buenos Ayres on to the land. Four leagues this side of the German's estancia, an Irishman has purchased some four square leagues of land. The trees seem budding plants, and the nearer we approach the more each defined mass, as it were, opens out and descends very rapidly. The cold becomes less intense, and the earth, which just now seemed but a grayish mass, unfolds itself anew, with its various and beautiful features. The atmosphere is so rare that it is difficult to breathe, and the voice can no longer be heard, except with extreme difficulty; and small animals die at this degree of elevation.

When the crowd turned down Calle Florida, there were close upon 5,000 persons in the long file of the crowd. The meeting was carried off in silence to the Plaza. The speaker, on concluding, was embraced by General Yriarte.

The committee seemed anxious to break up the meeting, and the speaker, on concluding, was embraced by General Yriarte.

General Yriarte, having taken off his hat, opened the affair by saluting the statue of General San Martín, in the name of Argentina and all South American republicans. He briefly explained the object of the meeting, and uttered amidst sundry "Vivas!"

Don Alvaro Barros, an old gentleman who had held some civic post under the first Republican Government, reminded the audience of the efforts made by their forefathers for liberty, and hoped the present generation would bury the Vandals who dared to pollute the sacred soil of America. The audience, however, was not so easily won over, and the speaker's words were drowned in a fierce encounter to free ourselves from the galling yoke which Spain, the mother country, had imposed on the kingdom of the Incas. Under the leadership of the speaker, the audience, in a few moments, was pointing to the statue, this second time, and who crossed the snow-capped Andes, we carried the Argentine flag from the triumph to triumph, till San Martín, on the 5th of April, 1818, smote down the lion of Castile, on the plains of Chacabuco, and freed

The Provincial Government has paid up the first call on the 19 shares of the Central Railway, which is subscribed for. The call amounted to the sum of 88,410 dollars. Notwithstanding the rain, there was a tremendous conflagration at the bank and four millions burnt, we believe that, like the last, the "quemazon" was strictly private. Mr. Zamudio sought to burn the money in the patio, where the public could see for themselves the paper money going to blaze. Mr. Sanblan, a distinguished foreigner, married into one of the oldest families in town, died on Saturday.

Messrs. Double Brothers have presented the Correntine Government with two cotton gins. This leading English house has always displayed the most praiseworthy interest in cotton-planting, and has set a good example to all the other English houses in town. We hope Mr. Blanco, of Montevideo, who is at present in this city trying to get up a cotton-planting society, will meet with support from our English houses; they should study their own interests in favouring this industry. The day we export fifty thousand bales of cotton, our English merchants may double their households.

Compass, the great monetary correspondent of the "Nacion Argentina," has published his last article. This piece is, to large quantities of specie from Europe, and retains it here. We agree with this tedious correspondent, but we are anxious to know how we can keep the specie here when we spend more than we earn. Mr. Riestra's project is the most serious one produced; we hope to see it carried, but Article 28 must be passed.

Collisions near Montevideo. We have been informed that the Argentine steamer Corrientes, coming to this port from Buenos Ayres, met a vessel at 11:20 p.m. without any lights. When the Corrientes saw her, she was at such a short distance, that they had no time but to put the helm a starboard, and run into the prow of the N.E., the wind being fresh a head, and fanning 64 knots an hour. The collision occurred the collision between the mainmast and Gargo port, with the following injuries:—Cordova and stays of the mainmast broken, the cranes wrecked, and a boat knocked to pieces, the mainmast broken, and the engineers' cabin and pantry, with a great deal of the glass and earthenware they contained, damaged, mainmast and keel got out, and in general, great damage to the rigging. The Swedish brig Walkyren, and English ship Don Diego, which left Montevideo on the 2nd inst. the first of Liverpool, and the schooner New York, laden with produce, came foul of each other at 11 p.m., some night. The Swede lost her bowsprit, and suffered other injuries, which obliged her to put back to port for repairs. The Don Diego (this is the iron vessel which made so rapid a trip from Liverpool) was also injured, but has not returned.—"Estrefo Marítimo."

Performance of Atar-Gull. On Saturday evening at the invitation of Capt. Manilla we attended his Benefit at the Victoria Theatre. The house was crowded, the President and his family being present, and we remarked a good many English and other foreigners. The drama went off very well, the interest of the plot being sustained throughout, and the actors doing full justice to the various brilliant passages of the play. The author's political aversaries condemn Atar-Gull as a horribly stupid and also charged him with borrowing from Loggane Sub, but these assertions must destroy each other, and although we do not go so far as the "Tribuna" in our admiration, the tragedy seems to us really well written and full of dramatic effect.

The first act is the weakest, the dialogue being somewhat tedious. In the 2d and 3d, the incidents are well arranged, but the apostrophe of the ugly old negro in love with the heroine is too sublime, elevating "Samba" to the level of a Platonic philosopher. The "denouement" of Atar-Gull's conspiracy is very fine, except that we doubt the fact of the slaves committing suicide merely to do him a favor. In Act IV, we regret that the romance of implacible revenge has destroyed the moral, for the treacherous negro poisons his master, while the latter leaves him all his fortune.

Atar-Gull is a series of fine tableaux, in which the brilliancy of coloring destroys the effect of light and shade. It is a poetic narration in which the redundancy of metaphor sometimes clouds the argument, but the poetry of sentiment and dramatic grouping of characters and events, carry us through, and we are entertained with the result; however displeased by the moral. Puerdich's act is made to triumph over reputation, and the most diabolical revenge is shown to be triumphant. A natural impulse in the hearts of that race which we are asked to place on a level with
