America in Danger

A certain Chilean gentleman, remarkable for extreme views, in which he supposes philosophy to consist, has started the scientific and political world by announcing that the continent discovered by Columbus is in imminent danger.

Europe versus America: here is the great question of the day. The monarchies of the Old world are jealous of the superior progress, liberty and civilization of the republics of the New.

It is indeed true that Mexico, the first of Spanish-American republics and almost equal to all the rest collectively, has been converted to the monarchical system through French influence; but the retirement of England and Spain from the Vera Cruz expedition seems to contradict the existence of a conspiracy in that case.

But we will suppose that Messrs. Bilbao, Varela, and Guido apply the term in a moral not physical sense, and in this case the most robust American virtue has reason to tremble, not at a European combination, but at the simple frown of any corrupt-minded monarch who can command a dozen steel-plated frigates and 100,000 demoralized bayonets.

The rain on Thursday night has left Barracas in a frightful state; and if we have another heavy night's rain, all communication between Buenos Ayres and Barracas will be effectually cut off.

But it will be said America is really in danger if her sons cannot cope with one or all of the powers of Europe, and if her security be merely like that of Tartary or Central Africa.

Great Britain and France view with such jealousy any territorial acquisitions on the part of the other, that the extent cordile was almost disturbed by Napoleon's taking possession of the little islands of Tahiti; and neither would consent to have her neighbour's dominions increased by the sacrifice of some South American Republics.

Whatever jealousy there may be of other kingdoms, England should care nothing but confidence. English gold and English valentines mainly aided to establish the independence of this continent; and when the Peruvian President sent to improve the assistance of the British Admiral, last April, we feel assured he made no allusion to European conspiracies or rotten kingdoms.

Sar Bilbao is right in one respect, for America is in danger of herself. The Scripture says "whomsoever divided against itself cannot stand," and the divisions between some of these republics, as well as civil wars within their several frontiers, have reduced them to the lowest stage of national degradation.

Europe is not jealous but ashamed of S. America, and her efforts are for moral regeneration, not political overthrow. It is true that in the case of Mexico strong measures were found necessary, but that country had been already a prey to official bandits who broke open the English Consulate, violated all engagements, tarred the French sisters of charity into the street, murdered foreigners by wholesale, and laughed at the English bond-holders.

We are happy to say that Buenos Ayres, Chile, and Paraguay are far from such a state of things, and consequently from the necessity of armed intervention on the part of outraged humanity. Nay, these three countries are beginning to be excepted from the category of monarchies. What have we then to fear? Indeed it is a bad policy for us to identify our cause with nations whose very name was synonymous of infancy.

The rain on Thursday night has left Barracas in a frightful state; and if we have another heavy night's rain, all communication between Buenos Ayres and Barracas will be effectually cut off.

The mud in the Calle Larga is something of the most hideous nature, carts, waggons, gigs, railroads; even the diligences are all getting stuck right beneath the Hill; and now men on horseback are stationed with long ladders, in the vicinity of the pastures, to extricate the vehicles.

The fields which extend from the Calle Larga, in the direction of the Boca, are all covered with water; and we regret to say, that the river which is rising rapidly. If the rain continues, or the wind blows up the river, Barracas will be inundated.

plomatic relations have been broken off between Chili and Bolivia, and that the ministers of Peru and of the United States have preferred their good offices between the two Governments.

The state of the hill is truly lamentable: rats of the most dangerous character are every hour increasing. Something should be done to keep such an important thoroughfare in good repair.

Rotten Monarchies

To the Editors of the Standard

I have been painfully disappointed at the course which Argentines have taken in the Peruvian question.

The conduct of Admiral Pinzon seems to me, and most of my countrymen with whom I have spoken on the subject, as arbitrary and unjust.

A short time since Mr. Haslewood, a member of the London Stock Exchange, submitted a proposition for buying up the whole of the lands of Ecuador, New Granada, and Venezuela, a territory about equal to one sixth of the whole of Europe; and he justified his proposal on the ground that the present possessors were continually expending life and money in attempts to settle the question of their respective limits, and as the Republics did not know their own boundaries he thought it would greatly simplify matters, and save them much trouble and sorrow, if some arrangements could be made for buying up the whole in one lot, for the purpose of establishing upon the land new nations, new laws, and new life.

As so much has been said respecting the rotten monarchies of Europe, will you permit me to enclose you a few remarks about the rotten republics of South America, which I extract from the Railway News.

The 'Ferro Carril' in speaking of Entre Rios, says 'that the Hasques become immediately gauchas, instead of farmers.' We shall translate this important article of our colleague on Entre Rios, and publish it to-morrow.

We extract from a New York paper the following truly awful instance of sudden death: Last night Mr. Austin Drinker, of your city, fell dead while arguing a point before the Committee on Cities and Towns.

Mr. Thornton fell in Montevideo, and it is not known when he returns.

Mr. Wells has sent the following letter to the M. Argentine: Believing it is perfectly practicable to cross this continent in a balloon in one or two days, I should be most happy if the Government, Municipality and citizens of B. Ayres, would help me to procure materials for a gigantic balloon, 200 feet in circumference, which would only be a little less than the Atlantic Balloon in which four persons made a trip from Saint Louis to New York (1200 miles) in 20 hours.

There will be a collection of barometers, thermometers, telescopes, compasses, sextants, quadrants, &c. to take altitudes; also maps, chronometers, tables of logarithms and all aeronautic apparatus, being a good several thousand feet with little streamers at fixed distances, by letting down which I may learn the air currents and change my position to take that most favorable.

Railway between Chile and Entre Rios

Mr. Brassy, who, it may be remembered, is the principal contractor for the Argentine Central Railway Co., and who is the richest and most influential Railway contractor in South America, has an agent inspecting and surveying the proposed route of the above Railway by the Chilean Government, we understand, is about to construct a line of Railway between Chile and Palenque, and intend to give Mr. Brassy the contract.

Rosario

The important lawsuit by Repetto and Co. against Schaffino, is terminated, and a judgment for 1500 ounces given: defendant's property is advertised to be sold by auction.

The grand news of the Peruvian meeting, if it has not yet reached the Pacific, will afford me occasion to be come a welcome messenger to the other side, in my great vessel, Republica Argentina.

Latest News from Montevideo

Notwithstanding the bad weather, the steamer arrived yesterday morning from Montevideo.

We have been favoured with a glimpse at a letter, written by one of the Ministers. It appears that there is no longer any doubt whatever as to the re-establishment of peace.

Awfully Sudden Death

Mr. Thornton fell in Montevideo, and it is not known when he returns.

Wool

The Committee on Manufactures have made a report relative to the duties on wool. They say that the expectation that low grades of wool would not compete with domestic products has not been realized.

not compete with domestic products has not been realized. Seven-eighths of all importations last year were invoiced below the minimum of 18 cents per pound, the whole averaging less than 17 cents.

Mr. Wells has sent the following letter to the M. Argentine: Believing it is perfectly practicable to cross this continent in a balloon in one or two days, I should be most happy if the Government, Municipality and citizens of B. Ayres, would help me to procure materials for a gigantic balloon, 200 feet in circumference, which would only be a little less than the Atlantic Balloon in which four persons made a trip from Saint Louis to New York (1200 miles) in 20 hours.

EDITOR'S TABLE

It appears the story about the reconciliation between M. Calvo and M. Elizalde is wrongly stated, and the editor of the Reforma did not throw his arms around our Foreign Minister, when he arrived at Montevideo; but M. Elizalde sent him a courteous invitation, which he accepted.

Major Richard of San Juan, we hear has sent down an araba and a half of pure silver, as a present to His Excellency, President Mitre.

Capt. Harrison and Sor. Mansilla's steamboat project is at last before Congress. We understand that there is every probability that it will be passed.

The clerks of Congress have sent in a protest respecting the smallness of their salaries. The probabilities are that these gent's will get a raise.

Affairs in the Province of Salta are not to say in the most promising condition. The revolution which occurred there the other day was a far more serious affair than represented, but the Governor had nothing whatever to do with it.

The Peruvian sympathizers are quite indignant at the Colon being refused them. The stockholders or proprietors of this building, we are quite certain would lend the Theatre, if the orators could be induced to avoid insulting all European nations.

Col. Vedía, one of the best officers in the Argentine army, is in town. He has recently arrived from the frontier, where he has been, for some time, serving.

Some of our subscribers are anxious to know what opera the 'Tribuna' advertised yesterday, as the most experienced opera goers state that they never heard of 'Machelt's' before.

The last mails from the interior brought rather unpleasant news from San Juan. Some would-be regenerators, called Agüero and Carrizo, with 14 followers, have invaded Valle Fertil, and robbed and plundered the inhabitants.

In Mendoza, we are glad to notice that sugar plantations are on the increase, good machinery, however, is much wanted to extract the sugar from the cane.

Forgeries seem to be on the increase in this city. Our colleague, the 'Tribuna' very properly states that the bank should reward the police officers who detected the forgers.

Police officer Pacheco took a forger of paper money the other day, and seized close on a million of false dollars. This same Igarzabal also arrested two Spanish captains, who had a large number of sovereigns and pound notes.

The 'Pueblo' editor attacks his former colleague, of 'Nacional' blundering celebrity (Sig. D'Amico) for having taken the post of Secretary to the Provincial Senate, he being a member of the Chamber of Deputies. It is, indeed, an indignity, and shows how little respect Sig. D'Amico has for the Deputy's toga; but Nature has her freaks, and men have been found to do worse, my cursu their fathers, for 3000 dollars (paper) per month.
