SHUNDAY, JULY 3, 1864.

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

It is in vain that we attempt to dissemble our grief at the distressing condition of the once happy United States on this its Eighty-Eighth Birth-Day.

But out of courtesy to our American friends we try to shake off the gloom which the news by the last packet has created, and, still clinging to the hope that better times are in store,

The unhappy civil war which now, for the last three years, has desolated that country, proves too clearly the frightful consequences which attend the triumph of democratic passion, the decline of political morality.

The rebellion of the South establishes beyond all manner of doubt, the unwieldy debility of democratic power.
Democratic zeal and democratic money have alike proved ineffectual in suffocating a rebellion which, we regret to say, seems to be prosecuted more for the purpose of pandering to European jealousy than for the honest assertion of liberty, where despotism was never known.

We would fain shut our eyes to the sequel of the present struggle, but the news by last packet has dashed from us the last hope we cherished. The dismemberment of the Union seems now inevitable, and with it perishes the vain illusion of Monroe.

The enemies of America may possibly wish to see the Southern General

It is to be hoped that passion has at last done its worst, and that men will now listen to reason. The inexorable jealousies of the South have brought mourning into every family in that region. The peremptory refusal of all concessions by the North has razed towns and ruined cities.

Previous to the commencement of this lamentable struggle, the footholds of Europe in America were extremely slender. The possessions of Russia were confined to the frigid zone; British sway in Canada was so very precarious that the Home Government almost ceased to have any influence from Labrador to the Pacific. Cuba was ripe for revolt, the whole West Indian Islands were republican to a man, European possessions upon the Spanish main were so insignificant, yet expensive, that had a Walker set his foot upon French or British Guiana, neither Government would have thought it worth their while to oppose him.

Verily, the war in the United States has not been a struggle between the North and the South, but a fight between Europe and America, at least if we are to judge by the results.

Americans, ye who still cling to the fixed principles of the immortal Washington, and the Government which he established, receive our sympathies on this sad 4th of July. Had the inspired advice of the Father of your country been attended to, who can put limit upon what the United States would have been this day? But enough,

There is great work going on in Congress at present, and an opposition party is at last raising its head. On Friday the House threw out Mr. Thornton's petition, to examine into the claims of British subjects for damages caused by Rosas shutting the port of Buenos Ayres.

The National Government seems at last anxious to do something towards fomenting immigration. A society has been formed by order of the President, in Rosario, to defray the expenses of sending immigrants into the interior.

The contractors of the Southern Railway, we hear, are pushing ahead too fast; they have 12 leagues of earthworks already finished, and the rails laid on one, but owing to the continuous rains, the workmen have to work knee-deep in water in many parts.

Mr. Frías, Sr. Grognet, Sr. Castellanos, Dr. Perkins, Sr. Corvalan, Sr.
Garrado, Sr. Larraga.

his paper money project, simply because the Government opposes it. We cannot say that we approve altogether of such extreme political sensibility; however, Sor Riestra has now thrown the onus on the Government, and if our Provincial Finance Minister allows the session to close without introducing some measure to redeem the currency he will be obliged to resign, in the same manner as his pristine colleague.

The Municipality of Zarate has sent in fifty thousand dollars to the Bank, to be set apart for building public schools in that thriving little town. This speaks well for the public men of Zarate, and reflects the highest credit on our active friend Don Manuel José de Ja Torre, the president of that body.

A friend of ours has called to say that he has a square league of land adjoining Mr. Fair's estancia in the Banda Oriental, which has a good brick ester-cia house on it, seven hundred cattle and a few thousand fine sheep.

Argentine boilers, up to the present, don't prove the thing. We hope, when Mr. Carulla's son comes out, that we may produce as good a steamboat boiler as our friends in Paraguay, but the last one made has proved a failure.

The diligences from the country towns in the South now invariably, when they get near the Barraqueas-bridge, hire bullocks, as the roads are so bad that the horses are no use.

The French mail closes on Monday, at 12 o'clock. Our extra numbers are delivered to subscribers this morning.

The news from Bragado, strange to say, is not as good as could be expected. Farmers assure us that the camps in that partido now are not so good as last summer; whilst an Irish estanciero, from the Fortín de Arco, positively asserts that the sheep farmers are now complaining of having too much grass, as it injures the sheep's hoofs.

The view of the Inauguration of the Southern Railway, in the 'Illustrated London News,' is the most miserable attempt we have ever beheld. We wonder our colleagues praise so mon-strously lame an attempt.

works already finished, and the rails

that what is good for Parisians must be good for Portenos.

Organization of Public Credit

Just 12 months ago the Argentine Congress, after long and stormy debates sanctioned a law with the above title.
Since then the public has waited with anxiety for the National Executive to put in force a measure so imperatively demanded by the private interests of many persons and by the credit itself of the Argentine Government.

By taking to a foreign market the Bonds of the Nat. Government, we shall not only give a patent proof of the faithful fulfilment of our promises and the prosperous condition of the country, but moreover create a source of riches for any future emergency in monetary affairs.

In the River Plate interest always ranges so high, as almost to check mercantile transactions. We read in the banking circulars that money is worth 12 to 15 p. cent per annum.

Miss Jane Young is summoned as witness for the trial of Juan Manuel Lopez, who murdered Mrs. Isabella Young in the district of Quilmes.

Don Isidoro Cordoba, (residence not known) is summoned to give evidence against Toribio Hernandez, charged with the murder of Gerónimo Cayarno,

The Government has given to its creditors Bonds which up to the present are selling under half their expressed value.

On Friday night the store of Mr.
Francis Mahon, Paseo Julio, was broken into. There is no trace of the burglars. This is the old story, but there are some suspicious circumstances calling for investigation, if our authorities seriously think it ever worth while to investigate such matters.

The store in question is two or three doors from the Capitanía del Puerto, where a guard is mounted day and night. People on the bench are little scrupulous in saying that it is impossible the doors could be broken open without the knowledge of the sentinel,

Seventeen hundred shares of the Grand Central stock have been taken in Cordova, of which 200 is by the Provincial Government, and 100 by the Municipality, and it is confidently expected the number will reach two thousand in a few days.

Some months ago the store of Corti Riva adjoining the Capitanía was broken into, and several articles including glazier's diamonds were stolen. The hieves were of course never found, but it was rumored that they were not very distant from the scene of outrage. It is an unlucky coincidence that such burglaries should happen so frequently alongside a barrack, as the guardians of public order will incur rather a suspicious reputation.

We are happy to learn that the burglars found nothing in Mr. Mahon's store, the till having been emptied the night before by its prudent owner, and they did not take the trouble to carry any merchandise. Nevertheless the outrage is the same, and if Mr. Mahon had been robbed of all in the world, he must look in vain for satisfaction.

The proceedings of the courts in this country are seldom or never published,

An obscure column of the most obscure of our daily papers we find the judicial list, which seldom claims the eye of any reader, but which affords room for gloomy reflection.

Manuel Perez is summoned for the third time to deliver himself up to arrest in the prison of San Nicolas for the charge of murdering Don Teodoro Corvalan, (date not mentioned). It is not at all likely an assassin will come with a rope around his neck begging to be hanged, yet this is the formula.

Jose Albornoz is summoned for cattle-stealing at San Nicolas, but as he has dispensed the first summons he hardly means to attend.

Roman Moreno is cited for stabbing and wounding at San Nicolas. No attendance to first and second summons.

Agustín Gomez is notified that in his absence he has been found guilty of cattle-stealing, along with José Borges.

We have received the 'Ferro-carril to the 1st inst. The mails from Salta and Tucuman arrived in Rosario on Thursday night, with dates from the first place to June 4th.

There is no news from Tucuman or the other provinces. The Chilean mail has not arrived, and it might be premature to celebrate the recovery of the Chilena Islands, as we have no news yet that Peru has made the slightest effort to fight the plucky little Spanish garrison of 1000 men, although the latter are 4000 leagues from home or reinforcements.

The collections for the Cordoba railway continue actively. The new paper, 'El Rosario,' has not yet come out; it is not wanted, and we hope may prove an abortion. A great Peruvian meeting will take place in the Plaza of Rosario on the 9th inst.

GREAT NEWS FROM CORDOBA.

Provincial Government, and 100 by the Municipality, and it is confidently ex-
sand in a few days.

Messrs. Duguid and Boyd suffered the most unheard-of hardships on the road. When starting from Rosario they had agreed for a private carriage, but were obliged to take the diligence, owing to want of horses. At the post-houses they could get nothing to eat, but had luckily a loaf of bread in their luggage. One of the more impatient passengers took out a revolver, at a post-house, and threatened to shoot—a sheep—in mass' the owner persisted in starting him. Our countrymen had to sleep on bare bricks. On their return the diligence stuck fast, with 15 passengers and a cart with produce annexed; the passengers were forced to walk for two days and a night, the peons remaining behind with the cart. Some of the latter were 36 hours without food. The roads are not bad, but there is a total want of horses, and great complaints are made respecting the post-house arrangements.

Our countrymen, on arrival yesterday, were cordially welcomed by crowds of friends: they look much improved after their journey. According to their glowing accounts of Cordoba, that province is able to keep not one but two railways in constant work.

LUISA MILLER.

The beautiful and tragic romance of Schiller, set to music by the great master Verdi, was performed at Colon theatre on Friday night. As it is ten years since its last performance in B.
Ayres it enjoyed almost the novelty of a new opera, yet the house was miserably thin, the audience hardly numbering 500, perhaps owing to the unfavorable weather.

The overture was well played, the music partaking of a strange wildness, quite in keeping with the story.

Mme. Mollo was the graceful heroine, the village belle enamored of the Count's son (Lelemi), and ably she sustained the whole rendering of the opera which may be said to fall entirely on the prima donna. The opening chorus 'Ti desta' was sung in excellent time. The affectionate scene 'A te dappresso' between the lovers was a very charming duet. Walter (Luisa's father) sang 'sacra la scelta' with great feeling. As usual 'the course of true love never does run smooth' and Rodolfo's father seeks to marry him to the Duchess, when he apprises him pledging his hand in the peasant's cabin.

Act II brings the terrible interview between the traitor Wurm and Luisa, in which the latter learns that the Count has condemned her father to death unless she renounce Rodolfo and pretend affection for Wurm. Mollo's acting of the awful sacrifice was perfection itself, and her prayer 'tu punisci' was most sweetly sung. Scene III was omitted, the vocalist performing the part of Duchess being quite unequal to the role. Celestino played the Count admirably. Lelemi gave the solo 'mi tradia' tastefully.

Act III was also shorn of the 1st scene, but the ensuing duet between Walter and Mollo made amends, and was loudly applauded. Rodolfo meets Luisa just as he is about to espouse the duchess, and believing her false poisons both himself and Luisa. The latter sings 'piangi piangi' which is the gem of the opera, and the lovers expire in each other's arms just as the guilty Count arrives to see the defeat of all his ambition, and Luisa's father falls a victim to his grief.

The opera is weak compared to the plot, there being few good songs and we hardly think it will prove a favorite with our public.

OLIDEN BEEF.

We have been requested to mention some circumstances respecting the dried beef thrown overboard at Liverpool in a putrid state. Sor Oliden states that his first despatch of beef this year from the River Platô for Liverpool was on the 7th May per steamer 'Una,' the rest following per Kepler. It is clear, therefore, that we cannot have account of such shipments before the month of August. It seems, however, that a certain Sor Biraben exports fresh beef (not dried) from Montevideo, and he has lately taken the liberty (says our informant) to export to Rio Janeiro some lots under the title Oliden beef.

The proprietors of the Grand Hotel du Louvre has taken it into his head to start a table d'hôte, on the principle that what is good for Parisians must
be good for Portenos.
