There are at this time many thousands of Confederate prisoners of war confined in the various forts and camps of the Northern States. A large proportion of them are wounded or sick, and all are in a state of destitution, the accounts of which, as given in private letters and in the nowspapers, present a picture of human suffering, which has searcely a parallel in modern times. The merest necessaries of tile are wanting, and frequently the wounded prisoner has no Horribote as war is in all its features, assuredly it has detected the contest in a second of the poor captive who, when the feverish excitement of the contest is elected to the bitter charity of strangers and foes, without one friendly hand to south the pains of body or friendly violet to whisper hope and comfort to his despiring mind. These men, out off from the assistance of their kindred or the protection of their Government, have preculiar claims out ho particular of their countrymen in Europe, and upon christian benevolence everywhere. They did not recklessly or from choice embrace the profession of arms, but in exchanging the comforts, and often the laxuries, of home for the toils and hardships of a comforts, and often the laxuries, of home for the toils and hardships of a comforts. The Southern of the conditions, such as are conducted by prisoners in the hands of the North, fall with tonessed severity.
